

CERTIFICADOS DE QUALIDADE

The Roly brand has got a wide range of cotton t-shirts adapted to the directive 96/74/CE. Moreover, the cotton fabrics of these t-shirts have overcome the Oeko-Tex Standard 100 tests. This fact implies a maximum comfort in their use, due to the employ of certificated raw materials that do not contain substances harmful for health. This guaranties the protection of the environment in all stages of production process.

These certifications distinguish: Environment- and health-friendly products certified by independent organisms of the European Union.

Our products, compared to others of same category have been produced contributing an efficient use of the Natural Resources, in a high level of environment protection.

The Ecological criteria that certify our cotton t-shirts are the result of scientific studies and of a wide amount of consultations to different social and economical actors approved by the states members of the European Union and the European Commission.

A life cycle analysis of the product has been made to define the ecological criteria that identifies any possible damage to environment in each of the stages of this cycle: from the stage before the production or the raw materials, and going through the production, distribution and packaging, until the use, recycling and elimination.

In each of these stages many factors have been taken into account : air and water quality, land protection, wastes reduction, energy, biodiversity or noise, and health harmless chemical products.

For this reason, by buying Roly brand cotton t-shirts, we are guaranteeing human health, and it is proof of a general compromise of all of us with the environment.
